Nick Inns studied ceramics at Bath Academy of Arts, where he concentrated on developing his throwing and hand building skills. He is now an experienced maker of thrown garden pottery and slip decorated earthenware, specialising in marbling techniques. His work sells at a variety of outlets, including crafts and ceramic galleries, the National Trust, and specialist nurseries. Nick also welcomes individual commissions and teaches adults, children and disadvantaged groups.

Course Description

Using coiling and slabbing techniques and various decorative methods, design and produce a functional object - a vase, a jug or a bowl. Students will be shown various hand building techniques using earthenware clay. The decoration will be based on ideas from nature.

Please wear comfortable clothes and bring an apron.

Sunglasses are advised as the workshop can be very bright.

* The cost of the materials are not included.
